

Clinical Practice Frequently Asked Question

Q: What is a stable airway?

A: A stable airway is when the patient can easily breathe without assistance. If the patient needs an oral airway, chin lift or jaw thrust, it is not a stable airway. If the patient has an ETT secured in place, that is a stable airway.