PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE:

Passion and Excellence: Growing, Learning, and Leading Together

Lori Silva, MSN, RN, CCRN, CPAN – ASPAN President 2024-2025

The excitement and passion for learning is still upon me as the summer months go by and fall is right around the corner. It is hard to believe it is just three months since many of us met in Orlando, Florida, for the 43rd ASPAN National Conference. I am enjoying watching online recorded sessions from the National Conference that I did not have time to attend in person for even more contact hours. There are 54 sessions that have been recorded and are now available for viewing free to those who attended the conference. Those who were not able to attend the conference this year can purchase access to these recordings. Please share with your fellow perianesthesia colleagues. ASPAN provides top-notch education for our specialty practice.

My presidential theme is "Passion and Excellence: Growing, Learning, and Leading Together." In the May/June edition of Breathline, I spoke of passion and excellence, the definitions, and the passion and excellence seen in our perianesthesia members. I want to take a few moments to look at what it means in growing, learning, and leading together in our organization.

Growing, Learning, and Leading Together

Let's take a moment to look at the definitions of growing, learning, and leading. Merriam-Webster defines growing as "increasing in size or amount," "becoming great in prevalence, popularity, or influence."¹ The definition of learning is "the act or experience of one that learns" and "knowledge or skill acquired by instruction or study."² Leading is defined by Merriam-Webster as "providing direction or guidance."³ One of the goals of my presidency is to grow our membership by reaching out at the grassroots level. My vision is to have every perianesthesia nurse across the country know about ASPAN and want to be a part of this amazing organization.

Alexandra Mihai defined professional learning communities as "an idea of creating a space for reflective practitioners to exchange and crowdsource ideas and support each other in their practice."⁴ While she was speaking about professional educational faculty, this same learning community can relate to perianesthesia nurses. We have professional learning communities within our organization. Various events such as National Conference, Perianesthesia Development Institute, component and ASPAN seminars bring education and collaboration to advance our practice. ASPAN's various committees, strategic work teams, and specialty practice groups collaborate to share ideas and reflect on issues to improve our practice. It takes time, commitment, and resources to build our learning communities. The engagement of our members is key to growing our organization. Think about inviting a friend or colleague to attend a conference or a meeting with you. It's that one-on-one relationship reaching out to someone and getting them involved, encouraging them to step up in leadership, or participating in a committee or event that makes a difference.

Lori Silva

These last three months since the National Conference have been busy with committees, strategic work teams, and specialty practice groups meeting together to establish goals for the coming year and work on doing the business of ASPAN. I had the privilege of participating in many of those virtual meetings, listening to great ideas and seeing experienced committee/SWT members mentor new members of each group. I am excited to see so many ASPAN members serving on committees and SWTs. There were over 209 Willingness to Serve forms submitted with 49 members new to serving on one or two of these committees/SWTs. Thank you to the many individuals contributing to the growth and success of the organization.

In June, the American Organization for Nursing Leadership (AONL) sponsored Advocacy Days June 3-4, 2024, in Washington, D.C. I joined the AONL Advocacy Day ASPAN scholarship recipients Lori Erni and Laurie

Laurino to learn how to advocate with our legislative leaders' national health issues. We were involved in policy discussions, legislative briefings, and training in preparation to meet with legislators and their staff. We met with our respective legislators at the Capitol to discuss national health issues and nursing issues related to our practice. This was a great experience, and we will share more in the coming months.

Fall will be soon upon us, and many components are planning fall seminars in the coming months. Take these opportunities to attend either in person or virtually one or several component educational seminars or ASPAN education in a variety of formats. On the ASPAN website, go to the section under Education and Events to see ASPAN seminars, ASPAN Learn, and Regional Events Calendar. There is a wealth of opportunities for all perianesthesia nurses to grow, learn, and lead together in our professional organization.

MASPAN Wins Gold Leaf Component of the Year Award!

Massachusetts Society of PeriAnesthesia Nurses

The Gold Leaf Award was created to recognize an outstanding component for their leadership, innovation, member development, communications, education services and community relations. It is also a road map for component growth and development. ASPAN had eight components apply, and they should be thanked for their hard work and all they do for their components! It was a pleasure to announce MASPAN (Massachusetts Society of PeriAnesthesia Nurses) as the Gold Leaf winner!

I would like to mention just a few of the remarkable works the winner of the Gold Leaf has accomplished. Their leadership shows involvement from across their state. In 2023, MASPAN held five conferences, with two of them being on certification review. They are a Shining Star recipient from ABPANC, and they took that award and recognized a member of their component as a Shining Star! At ASPAN's National Conference in 2023, MASPAN had an impressive nine Celebrate Successful Perianesthesia Practices Oral/Poster Presentations. MASPAN also did an outstanding job of recognizing member achievements, serving their community, and providing financial assistance to their members for seminars, conferences and recertification fees.

Congratulations, MASPAN!

DNR (Do Not Resuscitate): A Case Study

Lori Erni, BSN, RN, CCRN, CPAN – ASPAN Director for Clinical Practice

Clinical Practice

I would like to introduce myself. My name is Lori Erni, and I am the new Director for Clinical Practice. I have been a nurse for nearly 38 years and in the perianesthesia area since 2002. During my career, I spent six and a half years traveling as a PACU nurse and worked in small community hospitals and large university settings in all phases of care. I have cared for all ages and recovered many different types of patients after a large variety of surgical procedures. But I have now “grown up” and taken a permanent job in Salem, Oregon.

Melissa Davidson, the previous director for clinical practice, has been a mentor and guide through this transition. I did not know she was going to address the DNR status in the previous Breathline issue, but I wanted to provide a more personal insight.

Prior to working in the perianesthesia area, I spent a large portion of my career in cardiac critical care. The code status of our patients was readily discussed with the patient and their families. When I transferred to the pre-op area, this wasn't the case. Our most recent ASPAN Standards clearly state that a thorough discussion should be conducted and documented in the patient's chart.¹ The Patient Self-Determination Act states that patients should be guiding their healthcare and decisions. They should be able to determine what care that they want to receive.²

Last January, my elderly mother was hospitalized after presenting in the emergency room with a fractured hip and urosepsis. She was hypotensive and barely responsive. The ER physician discussed the options at that time. My mother was frail and a DNR. In my experience, I have seen patients recover from urosepsis. Our family had a discussion to proceed with pressors and a central line, but no intubation or CPR. Later that evening, my mother's blood pressure improved, and she was alert and oriented. Then, she said, “I want everything done!” The doctors were clear and appropriate in the eventual outcome, but this was her right.

As the days went on, she ended up intubated, sedated, restrained, and on continued pressors. She did improve enough to have her hip repaired. After several weeks, mom was able to be discharged to a rehabilitation facility. She did not remember any of her ICU stay. As time ensued, she did not get stronger and said, “I want to go to hospice. I can't do this. I do not want all the tubes.” Mom passed away peacefully a few days later. My siblings and I did not want her to suffer as she did. I did have to inform the nurses that this was her decision. It was her right to determine her care. My heart went out to all the nurses who cared for this frail, elderly woman.

I have spent the majority of my perianesthesia career in the PACU. There have been too many times when I and my colleagues have cared for the same kind of patient after a procedure. We see noted on the storyboard of their chart, the “DNR.” When discussed with the anesthesia provider or surgeon, we are met with “wheels out of the PACU, it goes back into effect.” This scenario seems to occur more often late in the day, as these patients are “add ons” or the weekend schedule. When this has occurred, I do always seek clarification. This is not usually well-received. I realized this conversation needs to start in the pre-op area. Education and review of code status and the details of what the patient wants needs to be documented. Many times, families are asked, “Do you want us to do everything?” without an explanation to what “everything” is.

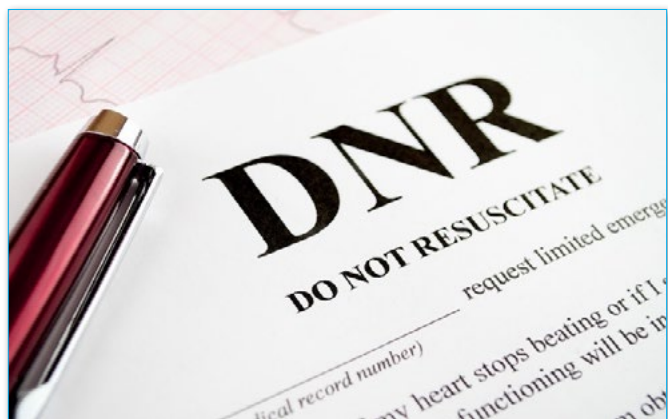

On a personal note, my own family is keenly aware of what “everything” means. In essence, this is another facet of “informed consent.” As our patients and families are in our care, we, as perianesthesia nurses, need to advocate for their care and support the care they do or do not want to receive.

Serving ASPAN - What an HONOR!

Amy Berardinelli, DNP, RN, NE-BC, CPAN, FASPAN
ASPAN Director for Clinical Inquiry

It was a true honor to attend the 43rd ASPAN National Conference with all of you! Meeting and re-meeting, networking, engaging, and supporting the spirit of inquiry as a perianesthesia nurse just keeps getting better. Our attendance, for the second year, comprised 50 percent newcomers. You could feel their energy.

There were 40 clinical inquiry posters. The topics ranged from hand-off to ERAS to urinary catheterization to the power of pause to burnout to corneal abrasions. There was a topic of interest for everyone. The oral poster presenters shared their research, QI, and evidence-based practice (EBP) implementation to a large, eager audience.

ASPAN nurses are blessed with numerous PhD prepared members who are willing to mentor and guide those in school, assist on the Magnet® journey, and pursue clinical inquiry at their organizations. Remember, ASPAN offers research grants. Information is available at www.aspan.org under the Clinical Inquiry tab. Any questions, please do not hesitate to reach out to me, Amy Berardinelli, at aberardinelli@aspan.org.

ASPAN Research Grants

Research grants are awarded twice a year. Application deadlines are January 1 and June 15 of each year. Grant applicants will be notified of approval or denial by March 15 of the same year (January applicants) and by August 1 of the same year (June applicants). All grant awardees will be acknowledged at the ASPAN National Conference.

If you are a member of the Clinical Inquiry Committee, we look forward to your expertise and extend our sincere appreciation for the volunteer hours you dedicate to:

1. Poster abstract review for National Conference
2. Poster judging for National Conference
3. Leveling evidence for the Standards publication
4. Peer review of Research Grant submissions
5. Participation in virtual journal club
6. Mentoring ASPAN members who wish to conduct research, EBP implementation, and QI projects
7. Collaborative projects with the Directors for Education and Clinical Practice
8. Assist with ASPAN-led research.....and so much more!

Without our dedicated members, we would not be able to provide perianesthesia nurses with the latest in perianesthesia education, research, clinical practice expertise, standards, and advocacy as the premier organization for perianesthesia nursing excellence. 🌱

National Conference Development Activities featured Great Support!

Chris Skinner, MSN, RN, CAPA – ASPAN Development SWT Coordinator

ASPAN's 43rd National Conference in Orlando, Florida was wonderful. The weather was delightful, and it was great to connect with friends and colleagues. Development activities included the Silent Auction, Development Breakfast, Hail, Honor, Salute!, the ASPAN Booth, and meeting our vendors in the Exhibit Hall.

The Silent Auction featured 91 items donated by individuals and components. This was a record number of items for a few years! The bidding activity was for the three days, culminating on Wednesday morning with folks hovering and placing their final bids to secure the item of their choice. The Silent Auction raised $5,007 for Development to fund scholarships, awards, and clinical inquiry. This was also a record amount not seen in the last few years!

▲ The Silent Auction was always buzzing with activity!

▲ Laughing hysterically during the humor presentation

Our Development Breakfast sold out with 161 participants! The breakfast was sponsored by Soothing Scents. Past President Regina Hoefner-Notz was our keynote speaker. Her topic of "I Cried so Hard I Laughed" on nursing humor had us almost rolling in the aisles at her stories. We then installed the latest Legacy for Life members, which included FLASPAN, Meg Beturne, Margaret McNeill, Barb Godden, Mary Catherine Moynahan, and Esther Watson (posthumously). A complete list of Legacy for Life members is listed on page 14. The Patricia E. Hansen Memorial Honoree was also announced at the breakfast. This award is given to the scholarship recipient who had the highest number of points on their application for a National Conference scholarship. Regina Hoefner-Notz received the award this year! To round out the breakfast, attendees filled out Hail, Honor, and Salute! forms.

▲ Can we answer your questions?

▲ Attendees speaking to vendors in the Exhibit Hall

We also want to thank the 21 components and many corporate sponsors for their support this year. Please see the complete list of corporate and component sponsors on page 14. Special thanks to everyone who donated to, and assisted with, the Silent Auction and manning the ASPAN booth. We couldn't have done it without you!

I encourage everyone who attends the National Conference in person in Dallas 2025 to sign up for the Development Breakfast and participate by donating and bidding on items at the Silent Auction. Hope to see you there! 🌿

Think and Plan

ElizaBeth Cooper, BSN, RN, LMT, CAPA

I especially enjoyed the sessions I attended at the 2024 ASPAN National Conference in Orlando. The gist of what I learned this time made me reflect on some life-learning principles. I especially remember these when thinking about problem-solving and reflection.

“An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure” is attributed to Benjamin Franklin. He was reported to have written this around 1735. He had been visiting Boston and was impressed at their fire emergency plan.¹ This quote is my reminder to not wait until the last minute.

I have collaborated with many nurses over my career. We all have memories of those unforgettable co-workers. I especially remember Nancy. She was a no-nonsense person who worked as a float nurse. She had years of experience, and I was the new nurse when we met. Our paths crossed many times, and we ended up being friends. Whenever a new guideline or change of policy would come out, she would say, “The more things change, the more they stay the same.” I also recall her adding, “We tried that way before, but now we’re trying the way differently.” I have since learned it was a famous quotation by Alphonse Kerr.²

We strive to become critical thinkers in our profession. We must prioritize our patient’s acuity to ensure survival. How many times do nurses ask themselves what they could do differently next time? Personally, I have found Benjamin Franklin’s planning quote helpful through these years. And my friend Nancy’s statement would make me ponder the real reason the change was being made.

Charles Deming taught us that we should look at a problem as a system deficit instead of deficient performance.⁴ People do not intentionally try to perform subpar. An example is staffing on a preop and postanesthesia care unit. The number and time expectation of cases should be contributing factors to adjust how much staff is needed to complete the day. Staggering staff shift times certainly improves the flow.

The quotes I shared cause me to think about the relevance of them in today’s world. I receive regular emails from the Employee Assistance Program based in Australia. One recent post was about well-being and the “Seven Roots of Wellness.”⁴

1. Intellectual Root: The ability to think with an open mind, nonjudgmental, allowing self to learn new concepts in and out of the workplace
2. Emotional Root: The ability to be aware of and navigate one’s range of emotions. Navigation includes keeping check of one’s response and constructively dealing with these emotions
3. Physical Root: Caring for self by making purposeful choices that promote optimal health
4. Social Root: Enjoying personal connections with others. Also having the ability to manage conflict productively
5. Spiritual Root: Making meaning of life events and understanding one’s purpose, along with compassion for self and others
6. Environmental Root: Awareness of respect for our environment and resources

Lori and her husband Kevin, a retired paramedic, have been married for 33 years. They have three adult children, Chris, Elizabeth, and Josh. They enjoy camping, traveling to the coast and countryside, and football/baseball games.

Lori has served in various leadership roles within her home component, the PeriAnesthesia Nurses Association of California (PANAC), including president, treasurer, and education chair. She has served as ASPAN's treasurer, vice president/president-elect, and currently as 2024-2025 ASPAN president. Lori feels the most enjoyable part of being a member of PANAC and ASPAN is meeting amazing colleagues from across the country and sharing her love of perianesthesia nursing.

Vice President/President-Elect

Ursula has been a nurse for 47 years, starting her career in the ICU in Pittsburgh.
